Give Bubba one more chance

From Facebook

It was graduation night at Cox High School, and they were about halfway through the ceremony when the principal said, "Ladies and Gentlemen, we have a problem, Bubba is a few credits short and won't be able to graduate tonight." Well now, Bubba was the starting right guard for Cox's football team, and when the student body heard that he wasn't going to graduate, they all jumped up and started to chant, "Give Bubba another chance, give Bubba another chance!" Pat Dye and the principal had a quick conference, and afterward, the principal announced that they have decided to give Bubba another chance. They inform Bubba that they will provide him with a "One Question" math test and if he passes, he can graduate. The question is, "What is two plus three?" Bubba thinks for about 20 minutes and finally says, "I have it! The answer is five!" There is complete silence in the auditorium for a couple of seconds, and then the entire Cox High School football team jumps up and begins to chant, "Give Bubba one more chance. Give Bubba one more Chance!"
